The music at the M. E. church last Sunday morning furnished by the chorus choir under the direction of W. S. Wight and assisted by Mr. H. P. Dennison, tenor, of West Bethel was said to be the best ever heard in that church. The duet "Hope Beyond" by Prof. Wight and Mr. Dennison was finely rendered and much appreciated. There was also a very fine program of special music at the Sunday School Rally Day exercises in the evening.

The Board of County Commissioners recently inspected the present year's work on the State road. The members of the Board expressed themselves well pleased with the work and complimented the municipal officers on its construction. This year the work was done on Emerson Hill, so-called near the Newry town line at the Bear river bridge. About $415 was expended and 1,000 feet of roadway covered from the top of the steep hill to within about 1,000 feet of the bridge. Some 550 cubic yards of solid rock was put into the road bed at the foot of the hill and between the foot and the little rise farther on toward the bridge, and then some five feet was taken from the steep part of the hill to cover this rock. The rock was put in from eighteen inches to four feet along the roadway. A large stone culvert twenty-nine feet long was constructed to carry off the water and special means were provided for draining the road. The sharp rise nearer the bridge was cut through some five feet being taken off. This work makes a permanent road of the best kind and greatly improves the hill which has always been a bad place for travel. For the two previous years the work has been done in the village near the overhead bridge.

W. S. Wight started yesterday for Island Falls, Patten and Ashland, Aroostook county, to organize choruses and teach singing classes. There is a great call for good teachers to do this work and Maine was never more aroused to it than at the present time.

Fare thee well if though wilt come to the Chicken Pie Supper at Pattee chapel next Thursday evening at 6 p. m. Come thee and thine and be filled and buy all sorts of useful articles there on sale, and you will rest with a clear conscience until the gentlemen's supper later in the season.

A Warning to the Owners of Poultry.

Bethel citizens are hereby cautioned not to leave unfastened the doors of their poultry houses during the season of chicken pie suppers. But, though the people of the Universalist Parish have a well sustained reputation for integrity, there are members tall enough to reach the tallest roosts, still you need not fear of getting tainted chicken in those delicious 25 cent pies at Pattee Chapel next Thursday evening, from 6 to 7:30 o'clock.

A Step Forward.

The first fruit of Festival fervor appears in the welcome which that musical enthusiast, Mr. Scott Wight has found in his happy plan of teaching music to the young people of our schools. It is indeed to be hoped that it will not long be necessary to support such instruction by private subscription. Teaching so essential should be supplied by the State or by the town. But meantime, thanks to Mr. Wight's enthusiasm and the ready response of those to whom he appealed, the good work is inaugurated. How far reaching the results mentally, morally, socially, it is impossible to predict. It will be, if ably supported, an uplift in countless directions, an impulse, an inspiration impossible to measure.

A superintendent of schools in one of our cities once made to me the statement that he never yet had found a child who could not be taught to sing by the Holt method. Apart from that, there is to be gained, even by those least gifted in ear or voice, an intelligent comprehension of music, which is in itself not only an educative force, but it opens a whole new world of enjoyment. The Holt method with charts has been found productive of remarkable results.

Now let the parents of children and the lovers of good things stand sympathetically behind this movement. Let us not stop with the giving of our dollars but add thereto our enthusiasm and interest.

Miss Bessie Andrews will meet the scholars daily the half hour following the afternoon session. This is the nearest approach we have yet made as a community toward having music taught, as it should be by rights, in our schools. This we hope is but a stepping stone to wider opportunity. The magnificent work of our own Mr. Chapman, of which every man, woman and child in Bethel, should be proud, is surely leading to a great musical awakening throughout the State.

Let us be in it. Let us be drilling recruits for those mighty choruses of the future which happily for years to come shall be held and swayed by that marvelous, magical baton.

The Irishman Had doubts.

As is well known, Rev. Robert Collyer of New York city was a blacksmith in Germantown, Penn., before he became a preacher. Once, when there was little work at hand, he asked a builder in his neighborhood for something to do. The latter replied that all he could give him would be a job carrying the hod.

"I'm your man," replied the blacksmith, promptly.

Years afterward, while an imposing edifice was being erected in Chicago for Dr. Collyer, he was standing among the beams, watching the progress of the work, when an Irishman came along carrying a hod of bricks. Dr. Collyer spoke to him and he paused.

"This is hard work, sorr," said the Irishman.

"I know that well," answered Dr. Collyer; "in my day I've carried the hod myself."

"The Irishman stared at me an instant," said Dr. Collyer in relating the incident, "and then went on his way mumbling something that sounded suspiciously like 'I wouldn't a' belaved the parson was such a liar.'—Success.

"I never thought it was so serious. The window is broke on both sides."

Got the Tune All Right.

A new Irish porter was at work on an English train. The head porter directed the new man to imitate him closely, and thereby learn his duties.

When the first train came into the station the head porter shouted, "Ferryhill, change for Hartlepool, Stockton and Middlesboro; change for Spennymoor, Cooxhoe and Trindon; keep your seats going north."

Barney strode after him and shouted in louder voice: "Ferryhill; change for Dahore, Umphump, Tootaloor, Diderham, change for Coxcomb, Morrham, rindham, Coldham; kase your seats where you are."

The station master called him aside and showed him the right names on the time table.

Barney removed his cap and said politely, "Thank you, sir. I got hold of the music, but I couldn't catch the words."—Household Words.

Neighborly Love.

He—No, the neighbors.

Constable—He stopped his motor car at a watering trough for horses, sir!—London Tit-Bits.

BOBBIE'S ESSAY ON POLICEMEN.

Noble Heroes Ever Striving to Have the Law Respected.

When I get big I think I will be a policeman, all you have to do if you are a policeman is to stand on the corner or else help a pritty girl across the street, then when it is nite you walk along and try all the doors on your beet, and if a burglar shoots you in the head when you are trying the door the paper will print your picture and say A noble hero who died doing his duty.

Sometimes you get a chance to arrest a man that has a jag, and if he has any munny maybe he will give you a nise tip for taking cair of him, but of course you can't keep the tip, you give it back and say No, I am merely doing my duty.

When there is a great crime and everybody wants to find out about it they look in the paper and see what the police are doing. The police doant always find the man, but they offer a big prize and sum other people find the man, and then every one says its pretty hard to fool the police.

The first policeman was Cain, he took his club & told Abel to move on, and Abel said When I get red,dy, & Cain cracked his skull and said The law must be respected, then Adam came and said Where is Abel, and Cain said I doant know, and when he lied the Lord took away his star & told him to move on himself, and Cain kept moving on till he died.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

All Invited.

Not long ago, one Sunday morning, a minister forgot to give the usual announcement of social events for the week. He had uttered some words of his final blessing, when a deacon, in a whisper, invited his attention to the omission. Whereupon the clergyman ceased praying and said:

"Brethren, I omitted to inform you that an oyster supper will be served at Brother Mullin's house next Friday evening, the 20th instant. All are invited to come, bringing their own bowls and spoons." Then, continuing his invocation, quite unconscious of the humor of the situation, the worthy man added:

"And may the Lord have mercy on your souls! Amen."—Harper's Weekly.

Standing Room Only.

Mark Twain, in his lecturing days, reached a small Eastern town one afternoon and went before dinner to a barber's to be shaved.

"You are a stranger in town, sir?" the barber asked.

"Yes, I'm a stranger here," was the reply.

"We're having a good lecture here to-night, sir," said the barber. "A Mark Twain lecture. Are you going to it?"

"Yes, I think I will," said Mr. Clemens.

"Have you got your ticket yet?" the barber asked.

"No; not yet," said the other.

"Then, sir, you'll have to stand." "Dear me!" Mr. Clemens exclaimed. "It seems as if I always have to stand when I hear that man Twain lecture."—Buffalo Enquirer.

As the Boy Understood It.

"During the taking of a religious census of the District of Columbia the past winter," relates a Representative from Tennessee, "a couple of young ladies who were engaged in the work stopped at my home on Capitol Hill, and when the bell rang it was answered by the negro boy I brought from Tennessee with me. The ladies asked him:

"Will you please tell me who lives here?"

"Yessum; Mistah Johnsing," was the answer.

"Is he a Christian?"

"No, ma'am. He's er Congressman from Tennessee."

Meeting His Enemies.

The other morning little Bobby awoke and told about his wonderful dream.

"I dreamt I went to paradise," related Bobby.

"And who were there?" asked his mother.

"All the good people. Then I dreamt I went to the other place."

"And who was there, Bobby?"

"Nobody but truant officers and dogcatchers."—Chicago News.

Not a Masterpiece.

A Scotch laboring man who had married a rich widow exceptional for her plainness was accosted by his employer. "Well, Thomas," he said, "I hear you are married. What sort of a wife have you got?"

"Weel, sir," was the response, "she's the Lord's handiwork, but I canna say she's His masterpiece."—Harper's Weekly.

Her Surprise.

"Yes," said the veteran of many wars, "I have participated in seventeen engagements."

"What!" exclaimed the pretty grass widow. "And you are still a bachelor?"

Serves Him Right.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Mr. Swellman, "the baby has just eaten a lot of that dog biscuit."

"Never mind," replied Mrs. Swellman, "it just serves Flo right, for he has often eaten the baby's food."—Answers.

He Was Mad.

"What! Paid $50 for a hat? Woman, you are mad?"

"No—but you are, all right!"—Cleveland Leader.

WHAT WEBSTER WANTED.

To Obviate the Necessity of Computing Interest.

Daniel Webster, the famous American statesman, once dined with an old Boston merchant, and when they came to the wine a dusty old bottle was carefully opened by the servant and passed to the host. Taking the bottle, he filled Webster's glass and handed it to him. Then, pouring out another for himself, he held it to the light and said:

"How do you like it, Mr. Webster?"

"I think it is a fine specimen of old port."

"Now, can you guess what it cost me?" asked the host.

"Surely not," said Webster. "I only know that it is excellent."

"Well, now, I can tell you, for I made a careful estimate the other day. When I add the interest to the first price, I find that it costs me the sum of just five shillings per glass."

"Good gracious! You don't say so!" cried Webster. And then, draining his glass, says a biographer, he presented it again, with the remark:

"Fill it up again as quick as you can, for I want to stop that confounded interest."

No Escape.

The following telephone conversation is reported to have been heard between a certain well-known young financier and a society woman whose functions are considered somewhat boring:

"Is this Mr. —?"

"Yes."

"This is Mrs. —. Won't you give us the pleasure of your company at dinner on Monday?"

"I'm sorry, Mrs. —, but I have a partial engagement for Monday."

"Can you come Tuesday, then?"

"Why, it is most unfortunate, but I have a partial engagement for Tuesday also."

"Well, how about Wednesday?"

"Oh, yes! I'll come Monday."

Many Mothers of a Like Opinion.

No one who is acquainted with its good qualities can be surprised at the great popularity of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It not only cures colds and grip effectually and permanently, but prevents these diseases from resulting in pneumonia. It is also a certain cure for croup. Whooping cough is not dangerous when this remedy is given. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. It is also pleasant to take. When all of these facts are taken into consideration it is not surprising that people in foreign lands, as well as at home, esteem this remedy very highly and very few are willing to take any other after having once used it.

Getting a Good Start.

"Miss Sophie," beloved benefactress of half the poor of New Orleans, sat at her desk writing when an elderly woman who had made many previous demands upon her was ushered in.
"O, Miss Sophie," she said, breathlessly, "I want to borrow a dollar, please, right away."

"What do you need the money for, Ermagrad?"

"Well, now, you see, I'm going to get married, and I need it for the license."

"But if the man you are to marry cannot pay for the license, how is he going to support you?"

"That's just what I want to explain to you, Miss Sophie. You see tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day, and we are coming to your free dinner. Then you always give us something to take home, and in the evening the King's Daughters are going to have a basket distribution, and we shall each get one. That will keep us a week easily, and by that time we'll be on our feet."

John Williams and Tom Reed

One of the stories told by Mr. Williams concerning the late Speaker Thomas B. Reed, was as follows:
"One day," said Mr. Williams, "I met Mr. Reed coming out of the cloakroom and he said to me in that peculiar drawl of his: 'Williams, whatever makes you such a bitter partisan?'"

"Well, Mr. Speaker, that's pretty good coming from you, isn't it?" I replied.

"Never mind me, he replied, 'but why are you such a bitter partisan?'"

"Well, I'll tell you," I said. "You know I never saw a Republican until I was 38 years old and I can't get used to them, somehow."

"He looked at me reproachfully and walked away without another word."

Why Uncle Ned Saved Him.

"That was a brave act!" ejaculated a Boston man, as he stood on the wharf in a little southern town and saw an old negro plunge unhesitatingly into the water to save a very small boy who had stumbled and fallen from some piling. "A brave act, and he is an hero, no matter how black his skin is!"

The Bostonian was foremost in the group that gathered about Uncle Ned when he climbed back on the dock with the rescued lad.

"Your son, is it?" he queried. "Or perhaps only your grandson?"

There was very fervent admiration in the down-easter's tones as he put the question.

"No, sub; no, sub," gurgled Uncle Ned. "Dat ill' rascal ain't no kinnyer er mine."

"Then it was all the braver!" exclaimed the interrogator, positively baring his head out of respect for the old man's high-born courage.

"Huh," spluttered the hero, "you sho' don't think I see durn fool 'nough to let dat boy drown when he's got every speck er my fish-bait in his pocket?"—Washington Post.

HANOVER.

Birthday surprise parties are the order of the day. Thursday afternoon, Oct 5, twenty-five of our village ladies took their fancy work and supper and climbed the hill to Hillside Rest to help make happy the sixtieth birthday of Miss Helen M. Staples. They took her quite unaware, and very much by surprise, as she had it in mind that her birthday was not until the day following.

A most delightful afternoon was spent. The reading of several poems which had been sent Miss Staples by friends, and the music by Miss Howe and Miss Roberts was much enjoyed by all. At five o'clock a delicious supper of sandwiches, cake and coffee was served. Saturday evening, Oct. 7, twenty-three ladies called upon Mrs. O. P. Russell, it being the occasion of her forty-eighth birthday. The evening was spent very pleasantly at whist and finish. Refreshments of apples, fancy crackers and olives were served by Miss Russell.

Mrs. W. S. Howe and Mrs. O. E. Twitchell have returned from a most delightful trip of six weeks to Denver, Col., and vicinity.

Master Jesse Twitchell who has been spending several weeks with his grandparents in Port and, has returned.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cummings and Master Charles of Norway, with three guests spent two days at Camp Bruin, recently.

We are very glad to learn that Miss Florence Brown who has been critically ill with typhoid fever in Waltham, Mass., is much better.

Better Than Pills.

The question has been asked—In what way are Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets superior to the ordinary cathartic and liver pills? Our answer is—They are easier and more pleasant to take and their effect is so gentle and so agreeable that one hardly realizes that it is produced by a medicine. Then they not only move the bowels but improve the appetite and aid the digestion. For sale at 25 cents per bottle by G. R. Wiley, Bethel; H. W. Dennison, West Bethel; E. L. Tebbets, Locke Mills; J. ## Cornelia M. Dow.

In the recent death of Cornelia M. Dow, daughter of Gen. Neal Dow of Portland, not only are family and friends bereaved, but many organizations of which she was a part, have sustained a great loss. Being a thorough business woman, she was asked to fill many offices which few would feel capable of occupying. Up to the very day before her death, she was attending to the needs of these societies, instead of thinking of her own comfort.

The funeral service was held at her home, 714 Congress street, the large rooms being filled to overflowing with those who loved her and sincerely mourned her loss. The Portland Woman's Christian Temperance Union attended in a body, and together repeated the 23rd Psalm. The service was brief but impressive. Rev. Mr. Mudie of the Second Parish Church, of which Miss Dow was a member, read selections from the Scripture and offered prayer, and Rev. Rollin T. Hack, her former pastor, made some very interesting and appropriate remarks.

The rooms were beautiful with flowers—even the casket being covered with them. At her own request, the body was to be taken to Mt. Auburn for cremation, the urn of ashes to be returned and placed in the family tomb at Evergreen Cemetery. May her life of unselfishness and devotion influence many others to follow in her footsteps.

He Won the Bet.

A hotel proprietor in Baltimore tells an amusing story, in which the main figure is an old gentleman well known to the waiters in the hotels of the Monumental City for his aversion to the "tipping" system.

One evening the old gentleman, having finished his dinner, was preparing to leave the hotel when the darky who had served him bowed and said, "Thank you very much, sah."

"What the deuce are you thanking me for?" angrily demanded the fellow, "I haven't given you anything."

"Dat's jest it, boss," responded the waiter, "I bet No. 10 fifty cents dat you wouldn't 'tip' me."

OFFICE BOY'S LESSON.

How One Employer Found His Match and Lost a Boy.

In a down town real estate office the boss called up an office boy who was first in line of promotion to a clerk's desk.

"Here, John," he said, "is $60 I want paid at once to Mr. Blank. Be sure to bring the receipt with you."

John took the roll of bills handed him by his employer and hurried away. He was obliged to travel to Harlem, and in three hours he came back looking very much upset. But he handed in the receipt all right, and went to his desk. The boss looked at him curiously several times during the day, but said nothing further to him until closing time.

Then he asked John:

"What did Mr. Blank say when you took him that money this morning?"

"Nothing," was John's brief response.

"Now, John," said the boss, "I want you to tell me the truth. I gave you only $55, and you brought me back a receipt for $60. Where did you get the other $5? I wanted to teach you a lesson before promoting you in handling cash. Never trust any man's word when he hands you a roll of bills. Count your money every time, my boy. I merely wanted to teach you a lesson in business."

"You mean old cuss!" shouted John. "I never suspected you of a trick like that. When Mr. Blank counted only $55 I told him you said it was $60 when you handed me the roll. He looked at me kind of queer and said, 'What are you going to do about it?'"

"Go in right home to mother," I says, 'an' get the money.'

"I went home and told mother I'd lost one of the five-dollar bills, and she lent me five dollars out of dad's insurance money, which she'd been savin'."

"When I paid Mr. Blank he says: 'Sonny, if ever you want to change your job come to me.'"

"And I'm going to do it. Please pay me back that five dollars and what's coming to me in wages. You are losing a good office boy and Mr. Blank's getting one. That's where I'm givin' you a lesson in business."—New York Times.

Gen. Sherman's Friend.

Upon a certain occasion Gen. Sherman was the guest of honor at a banquet, after which a reception was held. Among the line of people who filed in and out to shake hands with the great war hero Gen. Sherman perceived a face that was very familiar, but which he could not place.

"Who are you?" he asked in an apologetic aside, as he welcomed the guest heartily.

The man blushed and murmured behind a deprecatory hand.

"Made your shirt, sir."

"Ah, of course," exclaimed the general loudly, turning to the receiving committee behind him. "Gentlemen, allow me to present Major Schurtz."—Lippincott's.

Presidential Sarcasm.

"Are there any objections to the minutes, as read?" asked Mrs. U. May Leedes, president of the Out-somerset Woman's Club.

There were no objections. Nobody had heard the reading of the minutes.

For everybody was talking.

"Silence gives consent," said the president, loudly. "The minutes will stand approved."—Chicago Tribune.

Saved.

"Superstition is a great thing," said the returned explorer.

"Speaking from experience?" asked the close friend.

"Yes, sir. Why, on the last voyage when we were just about to famish every man discovered a rabbit's foot in his pocket and we had rabbit-foot soup."

Letter from Madame Eames.

The following letter written by Madame Eames to Prof. W. R. Chapman explains itself, and we are pleased to give it place in our columns:

Portland, Maine, October 10, 1905.

Dear Mr. Chapman:

Before leaving Maine I wish to thank you for all you have done to make my return to my childhood's home such a bright and happy one.

The greeting that you have been instrumental in preparing for me was all my heart could desire and more than even I expected. It has been a joy to sing here to my home people under such delightful conditions and I thank you for bringing me before them again.

Let me add also a word of hearty and sincere appreciation for the good work you are doing for music in Maine.

The people of this State I see are grateful to you for it as you deserve and they cannot be too much so.

You are keeping a high standard of music before them and it is gratifying to me to see, in the compiling of your program, that the best is what they want and enjoy. I must not forget dear Mrs. Chapman who does so much to further the success of your concerts, or rather festivals of music, by her untiring energy and tact.

With renewed and hearty congratulations believe me yours very cordially, are the cause of numerous little things that go wrong with children. When they are sick you rarely think their sickness is caused by worms. They are merely treated for worms. Yet worms are the cause of the ailments of children. They are also frequent cause of illness in adults. The familiar symptoms of worms are disturbed health, deranged stomach, furred tongue, variable appetite and bowels, increased thirst, itching of nostrils, indigestion, malaria, irritability, disturbed sleep, grinding of teeth, slow fever and often in children, convulsions.

UNSUSPECTED WORMS

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

is the only safe, sure, entirely vegetable worm remedy ever compounded. It not only expels worms but all worms, leaving the blood rich and pure and the whole system strong and healthy. Known and used successfully for three generations. This testimonial came with an order for more elixir.

Dr. J. F. True, Auburn, Me.:
"My youngest son shows symptoms of having worms, and I know that your worm medicine will give prompt relief. My oldest son now a sea captain, was, when a boy, sickly and in poor health. We gave him your elixir and he grew and thrived on it. We believe it saved his life."

Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. ### COMMUNICATION FROM G. R. WILEY.

Offer to Refund Money if Hyomei Does Not Cure Catarrh.

To the Editor of the News:

I have been asked recently if the advertisements printed in your columns regarding Hyomei were true, where I offer to refund the money if this treatment does not cure catarrh. I wish you would please print this letter in as conspicuous place as possible in your paper, saying that we absolutely agree to refund the money to any purchaser of a Hyomei outfit if it does not cure catarrh.

This outfit consists of an inhaler of a convenient size to be carried in the vest pocket so that the user can breathe Hyomei four or five times daily. With this is included a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. The outfit sells for $1.00 and is a most economical treatment for the inhaler lasts a lifetime and there is enough Hyomei for several weeks' use, while extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents.

I trust this letter will settle any doubts that may have arisen as to my willingness to refund the money for a Hyomei outfit, in case the purchaser is not perfectly satisfied.

Respectfully yours,

G. R. WILEY.

YOUNG FOLKS.

Tit for Tat.

One day early in the fall the chattering blue jay was very busy laying in his winter's stock of nuts and things. The squirrel was busy, too, but he had only small chance when the saucy jay was around. The bird scolded and fluttered until the squirrel must have thought himself a thief or at least have felt that he was ordered off of the premises.

Blue jay's cupboard, his storehouse was half way up an old black oak tree, where a knot hole had decayed enough to make a nice entrance to the hollow inside.

Now, Johnny, a small boy who went around with his eyes wide open, happened to see blue jay coming, and he was curious enough to know just what there was in the hollow tree. Imagine his delight upon thrusting his arm deep down into the hole to find there a fine store of nuts. What does he do but fill his pockets, run home and empty them, then come back for the rest of them. Of course, it wasn't quite fair. It wasn't what he would have wished if he had been the jay and the jay had been Johnny. But it was what he did.

Finding that nuts were ready to gather, Johnny soon had a good stock of them drying in the loft above the wagon shed. This place was good and airy with a window open at each end.

Close to the wagon shed stood a large white oak tree, some of its branches coming so close to the back window that they almost rubbed against it when the wind blew. It was a favorite trick of the red squirrels to make little excursions out of the woods, along the fence, clear up to the big oak, for a scamper through its branches.

Imagine the surprise of red Chicaree one afternoon as he looked into the back window of the wagon house loft to see Johnny's stock of nuts. The sight was dazzling. It almost turned his head. It was as if Johnny himself had stumbled upon a purse containing $500.

But red Chicaree did not quite fall out of the tree. Instead he invited himself inside the loft, where he soon stuffed both his cheeks with all the nuts he could carry. Then he scampered home to his tree house in the woods, where the nuts were put away. In some manner he imparted the news of his rich discovery to Mrs. Chicaree, and then they both ran along the old fence to the big tree, by the wagon house. Soon they both ran back with their cheeks suspiciously fat.

The truth is, they worked like beavers. When Johnny went to the loft to see how the nuts were drying, the cupboard was bare, as Mrs. Hubbard would have said. And so it turned out in the end, just as the old saying says, that "one" good turn deserves another."—Commercial.

A Hasty Boy.

Harry Gray played so hard and worked so fast that his people called him "Hasty Harry."

"See quickly, think quickly, act promptly," his father said, "and you may accomplish wonders."

Harry's home was on the bank of a deep river. Not far off lived two little boys, too young to swim or manage a boat. They often went out with Harry who let Sam try to paddle.

One morning they found Harry's boat fastened to the wharf. In they jumped and made it rock and splashed themselves with water. But all at once the boat broke away and floated out. Then came the steamer whistle. She was coming, swiftly down the river.

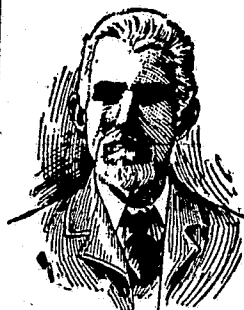

Harry and his sisters were coming down the path when they heard screams and cries for help. Hasty Harry saw—thought—and acted. Down he dashed, sprang from the wharf, and swam rapidly to the boat. He scrambled in and paddled. The steamer was bearing down on them like a great monster. One moment more and they were lost!

Not one desperate effort and they were out of her course and safe.

Couldn't Lift Ten Pounds.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

Sick kidneys cause a weak, lame or aching back, and a weak back makes a weak man. Can't be well and strong until the kidneys are cured. Treat them with Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's the testimony of one man cured.

J. B. Corton, farmer and lumberman, of Deppe, N. C., says "I suffered for years with my back. It was so bad that I could not walk any distance nor even ride in easy buggy. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sit anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Corton will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address: Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

Not one second too soon, for where they had been the big vessel plunged along, tossing the little craft like a cork on the water.

The steamer whistled, the passengers shouted, "Well done! Bravo! Hurrah! Hurrah!"

"Hasty Harry," his father whispered under cover of the cheers, "you have lived up to your name to-day."

Consumption Made Comfortable.

Icipient consumption is cured by Foley's Honey and Tar, but we do not hold out false hopes to consumptives by claiming that it will cure this dread disease in the advanced stages; but if the lungs are not too far gone Foley's Honey and Tar will effect a cure, as it stops the racking cough and soothes the inflamed air passages giving them a chance to heal, and even in the advanced stages it always gives comfort and relief. A. A. Herren of Finch, Ark., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best preparation for coughs and lung trouble. I know that it has cured consumption in the first stages." Sold by G. R. Wiley.

Cause of Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, or tetanus, is caused by a bacillus or germ which exists plentifully in street dirt. It is inactive so long as exposed to the air, but when carried beneath the skin, as in the wounds caused by percussion caps or by rusty nails, and when the air is excluded the germ is roused to activity and produces the most virulent poison known. These germs may be destroyed and all danger of lockjaw avoided by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm freely as soon as the injury is received. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and causes cuts, bruises and like injuries to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment. It is for sale by G. R. Wiley, Bethel; H. W. Dennison, West Bethel; E. L. Tebbets, Locke Mills; J. W. Bennett, Gilead.

HINTS FOR BATHERS.

The Opinions of Experts on the Necessary Duty.

"Don't worry, Polly," said Tom, casually, after listening to that young woman's wailings over the dangers of bathing, apropos of his imminent vacation trip. "Look here." He half rose from the hammock and took out of his pocket a strong, neatly inscribed envelope, bulky with clippings. The inscription was "Hints for Bathers."

"I began collecting directions by experts as early as last May," the resourceful Tom continued, "and I don't mind confessing to you, Polly, that it's been one of the most interesting hunts I ever engaged in. This collection is invaluable to one with whom searating is a fad. If I follow all the directions—"

"Well, I do hope you will, Tommy," said Polly, energetically, "for I just simply have the strongest sort of intuition that when you say good-bye to me before you start on that dreadful Atlantic City trip I'll never see you again. I must say that I am surprised that you've had so much foresight as to go prepared for the dangers that you'll meet."

"I'm prepared," said Tom. "Most of the daily papers have supplied me with hints, as well as the outing magazines. Listen."

And Tom read: "Never bathe directly in front of a bathing post, nor near one, as the suit may throw you against it with such force as to stun you and cause death."

"Oh, dear!" wailed Polly, in fearful relief over the danger escaped. "What if you hadn't clipped that out and kept it? You might have got thrown against the horrid thing and killed. Now, do promise me that you'll never even go in sight of a post."

Tom shuffled over the clippings. "Wait a bit," he said. "Here it is: 'Be sure that you always bathe in front of a bathing post. Then the surf, instead of carrying you out, will carry you straight toward the post, which you can grasp in moments of peril, and be saved.'"

"Why—" gasped Polly. "Here's another," said Tom, with a chuckle that Polly didn't hear. "Wet the wrists first on entering the water."

"Well, that's sensible," said Polly, tersely. "Because everybody knows that the pulses have a great deal to do with the heart—"

"Always wet the head first," read Tom from another slip. "Otherwise the sudden shock may cause brain trouble."

"Well," snapped Polly, "if I were you, I should seriously consider that." "Always enter the water with one plunge," remarked Tom in a conversational tone. "Prolonged delay is certain to induce a later chill."

"Not to say anything of what a figure a timid man cuts," remarked Polly, acidly.

"Never," read Tom, sepulchrally, "plunge into the water at once, as the sudden shock will often produce heart failure."

"Oh, Tommy!" wailed Polly. "What can you do?"

"I don't know," said Tom. "Here's something good, though: 'Always rest for half or three-quarters of an hour directly after your plunge.'"

"I know," said Polly, weakly. "It is good, Tommy, and I hope—"

"Never," read Tom, loudly, "allow yourself to lounge within an hour after bathing, as the muscles should be vigorously exercised in order to do away with the enervating effects of the water pressure against them."

"That sounds more sensible than the other, Tommy," ventured Polly, uncertainly. "Will—"

"Never bathe with your back to the current," remarked Tom, cheerfully, "as swimmers who risk this method are very liable to lose their feet."

"Oh, Tommy!" exclaimed Polly again.

"Always," read Tom, "bathe with your back to the current. Otherwise you are almost certain to lose your feet."

"Well, lose 'em, then," snapped the distracted Polly. "And go get drowned if you want to. Oh, Tommy, I didn't mean it. I didn't! I just simply know I'm going to be sorry some day because I said that."

"I'll send you a telegram after every sea bath, Polly," said Tom, consolingly. "Anyway, what do these fellows that write this gabble know about it? Polly, didn't I beat 'em all swimming when I was at college?"

"Yes, Tommy, you did," said Polly, with pride.

A Question

Little Lucy Locket She hasn't any pocket— No place to carry anything at all; While Lucy's brother Benny He has so very many, In which to put his marbles, top or ball, That when he's in a hurry "Is sometimes quite a worry To find the one he wants among them all."

Now why should Lucy Locket Not have a little pocket— A handy little pocket in her dress? And why should brother Benny Who doesn't need so many, Be favored with a dozen, more or less? The reason, if you know it, Be kind enough to show it, For really 'tis a puzzle, I confess. —St. Nicolas.

Every man favors honest government as long as it doesn't interfere with his interests.

Many a man who thinks he is smart outwits himself in trying to outwit others.

FIGHTERS RARELY RETURN.

A Pugilist Once Defeated Has Little Chance of Turning the Tables.

Time and again the question has been asked by followers of the ring whether a pugilist can "come back." That is, can a fighter who has once been on top retrieve his lost laurels by defeating the man who has already whipped him. Many scrappers have tried to upset the theory that such a thing is impossible, but somehow have failed. As a recent illustration of this fact, there is the bout between Young Corbett and Battling Nelson at San Francisco. When Corbett was vanquished the first time he contended that it was his poor condition and the fact that he had treated the Dane's fist ability too lightly that resulted in his undoing. So Corbett secured another chance, trained harder than ever for the fray, according to his own assertion, but as in the previous encounter, was compelled to bite the dust, and in quicker time too, than in his first effort.

Confidence in pugilism, when everything else is considered equal, is a great help to the man who possesses it. And it is doubly so when the possessor is going against an opponent whom he has already conquered. The fighter who is trying to regain the honors he has already lost is in abject fear of a repetition of a defeat, especially if it happens, that he has already been knocked out by his rival.

Often the rings hears of the rejuvenation of some fighter who in past days has been at the top of his division. By mending some of his mistakes he may succeed in winning a number of hard battles against opponents whom he had never faced before. He may show his old time skill in these mills and give his friends hope that he has not lost entirely the ability that made him the best of his weight and a champion.

But somehow as soon as he tackles the man who has succeeded first in dethroning him all the dash and cleverness he has displayed in his march to his former goal disappear, and he is once more back in the place where he started after his star had set.

After Jim Jeffries won the championship from Bob Fitzsimmons at Coney Island he proved himself a good fighter. But there was some doubt as to his real greatness, and he was forced to convince the critics as to his real ability by taking Fitz on again.—New York Sun.

Rights of Husbands.

I so often read something like this: "Husbands, don't bring your business worries home with you to your patient wife." I think it ought to read: "Wives, don't save up all your worries and grievances of the day to relate to your patient husband." How often during the day do some women make remarks like these: "Now John, I am going to tell you pa on you when he comes home tonight!" "Mary, I'll tell your father to whip you good for acting that way at school," etc.

Sure enough, as soon as the husband is comfortably seated in his favorite place the wife begins her little tale:

"Baby is so cross, Johnny talked back to me, I wish you would whip Mary for misbehaving at school. My back aches. We are nearly out of coal," etc.

Is it any wonder the husband happens to think of an engagement down town and forgets to come home until the other members of the family are in bed? Then the wife sits down and has a good cry, and makes up her mind that her husband is a brute and never did love her.

Dear wives and mothers, if you want to tell anything at night to your husband let it be something funny or sad; but don't let it be a fault finding tale about one of the children or some other member of your family.

A friend came to visit me the other day. I was not in at the time, but soon arrived. "Where in the world have you been?" she said.

I told her my husband and myself had been taking a walk around the "place." He wanted to show me where he planted his corn and how nice the wheat looked. "Of all things," said she "do you take an interest in those things? I never think of paying any attention to what my husband does." "Indeed I do," said I, a little nettled, "that's where my living comes from."

Most of the women expect their husbands to praise their cooking, their gowns their clean houses, etc. On the other hand, do they think to tell them how comfortable the house is and how happy they are to do little favors for them? Not often!

Do you ever ask your husband to go with you to pick out a dress or wrap? If not, just try it next time you get a new dress. Ask him to accompany you and help choose. See how pleased he will be. How would you feel if you were only asked to furnish the dollars and dimes and then given to understand that further aid was unnecessary?

When he gets anything new do you look at it and say: "It's all right," in kind of let-me-alone tone or do you tell him how nice he looks and how becoming his new tie is? I bought some caps for my boy once. When I got home I put one on my husband's head (just for fun). I said, "That's just what you want; it makes you look like a boy I used to go with," (meaning him.) He claimed that cap and wears it now and it is very becoming. I can just imagine what some women would have said. Something like this, "You don't need a cap. Your old hat is good enough for every day, and your straw hat will do for Sundays." A man likes to have a compliment on his looks, or about his clothes, as well as any woman, but he doesn't often get it from his wife.

Do you take time to sit out on the porch or under a shade tree with your husband, discuss the day's doings with him, or are you so busy that when he comes home from work that you hand him the baby to hold while he rests, and tell him you just must finish that apron before night? Let me tell you my way. When my husband comes in from a hard day's work I have plenty of water and soap and a clean towel ready for him, and a good fresh drink.

After making his toilet he says, "Let's sit out on the porch." "All right," says I, and up comes baby, if awake; if not I take my crocheting and out comes our two comfortable rockers. And then we sit and talk for an hour or more. I let nothing disturb our talk. We talk of crops, weather, our neighbors, or anything that interests us both. If a child comes with a tale of grievance, I send it away and tell it to go play and be good. I try to be companion as well as wife.

When your husband asks you to take a walk, don't you often tell him you haven't time? Of course you do. When your sweetheart asked you to take a walk, did you go? Yes, sir; you did not tell him you hadn't time. You saw that you had time, and arranged your work accordingly. Why not do so now?

What is that I hear some one saying: "She hasn't any children, or else she hires all her work done." No, sisters you are mistaken. I have nine very energetic, romping children. The oldest is only fifteen years old, and the baby only four months old. I do all my work, too, even to the sewing for the entire family. My little "steps" (as I call my children) help all they can, and we don't neglect or impose on their papa, either.

I had time to talk, to walk, to listen to and praise my husband before marriage. I take and make time and arrange my work to listen to and praise him now. So can you. Read and reflect, and bear this in mind: "Do unto others as you would be done by."—Tribune Farmer.

Men who Make Good Husbands.

An authority on mankind has given his views on the sort of men who make the best husbands. Among the really nice ones he classes the man who is fond of fishing, the lawyer and the all-round journalist. He does not enthuse over the popular doctor as a husband, and a musical genius or a man of letters gives him cold chills and shudders.

The author, he says, is so fond of his fine sentences that he is disagreeable when the baby cries, and makes himself generally odious about his food, the noise of the children and domestic infelicities that may come along. The musician cares for little except his art, and the wife is often secondary to the claims of the prima donna, or the sympathetic creature whose soul is as full of melody as his own.

All in all, the good journalist seems to have the most strong points. He is a bit of a philosopher, is likely to be practical, makes the best of what cannot be helped, and is full of alternatives. The lawyer is good to have in the house. He is likely to be alert, a good judge of human nature, a good talker and quite as fond of listening as of hearing the sound of his own voice. He studies human nature at home as well as abroad, and is altogether a good fellow.

The politician is a diplomat, and while he sometimes leaves all of his diplomacy outside of his front door, this is not always the case. The bachelor comes in for a lively scoring especially the one who claims that he has no small vices.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stands your lineen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail.

Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home of Swamp-Root, Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE

INTELLIGENT WOMEN PREPARE

Dangers and Pain of This Critical Period Avoided by the Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. E. G. Hyland

How many women realize that the most critical period in a woman's existence is the change of life, and that the anxiety felt by women as this time draws near is not without reason?

If her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy or congestion of any organ, it is at this time likely to become active and, with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden.

At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to begin their destructive work. Such warning symptoms as a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, dizziness, headache, dread of impending evil, sounds in the ears, timidity, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and incontinence are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the world's greatest remedy for women at this trying period, and may be relied upon to overcome all distressing symptoms and carry them safely through to a healthy and happy old age.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism, and builds up the weakened nervous system as no other medicine can.

Mrs. A. E. G. Hyland, of Chester-town, Md., in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham says:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with falling of the womb for years and was passing through the change of life. My womb was badly swollen. I had a good deal of soreness, dizzy spells, headaches, and was very nervous. I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all these distressing symptoms left me, and I have passed safely through the change of life a well woman."

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. It is free and always helpful.

PROOF POSITIVE.

Doubted its Newness.

In a certain home where the stork recently visited there is a six year old son of inquiring mind. When he was first taken in to see the new arrival, he exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, it hasn't any teeth!"

Then, clasping his hands in despair, he cried: "Somebody has done us! It's an old baby."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

SEA CHILDREN.

There is a pretty American custom prevailing in Massachusetts at Easter time. In Gloucester and Salem there are many fishermen. To follow the sea, as we know, is a dangerous calling, and the grave of many a brave man is under the waves of the stormy Atlantic. But on Easter we celebrate the resurrection of the dead, and in those fishing towns the children of the fishermen keep the festival in their own way. Filling their arms with flowers they march together to the piers, singing Easter carols. Here the flowers are cast into the sea, to float away on the blue waters and perhaps sink at last to where some "good man and true" is sleeping the last sleep beneath the waves. Shakespeare tells us how a woman whose father was drowned heard a spirit singing to her: "Full fathoms five thy father lies; Of his bones are coral made; Those are pearls that were his eyes; Nothing of him that doth fade, But doth suffer a sea change Into something rich and strange. Sea nymphs hourly ring his bell. Hark! now I hear them—ding-dong—bells!"

Don't you hope that the fishermen's children think of something as pretty as that when they remember the seafaring lives that have been blotted out beneath the great waves? That nothing of us doth fade, but passes into something rich and strange is, after all, alike on land and sea, the great lesson of this beautiful Easter time.

Ribbon Trimming.

It may not come amiss to mention the ways in which ribbons are used. The ribbon flowers have taken a place in dressmaking from which they will not soon be driven. But there are other ways of using ribbon which are newer and which are very pretty.

At a fashionable luncheon the other day the hostess wore a shirt waist of turquoise blue taffeta. There were wide silts out in the front across the satin ribbon was run. This was threaded through the silts and tied in a square rosette at one side of the yoke. No prettier trimming could be found for any waist than this.

Basket Egg, French Novelty.

Baskets the shape of an egg represent novelty in Easter souvenir line for little folks, and the small boy or girl who to-day received one of these wicker or straw receptacles with a tiny doll, a miniature train of cars or toy animal concealed therein may feel certain that he or she has the latest thing in tokens of the day.

The idea is a French one and the baskets come in a number of pretty shades and combinations.

Hard Life of Korean Women.

In no country is the life of women more pathetic than in Korea, where it might be termed imprisonment with hard labor from the age of seven until death. Little girls are secluded from the time of their betrothal. At an age varying from ten to sixteen years they are married to men they have never seen, and go away to take their place as menials.

AWAKEN, HEART!

By S. E. Hampton.

Good morning Spring!
The good you bring—
Resurrecting Earth's dead treasures;
Filling overflowing measures—
Is wondrous thing!

On Winter's tomb
The flowers bloom;
And cold, damp, dreary days no more
Bring want and woe to humble door,
And darkened room.

The busy bee
Hums merrily;
Hovering o'er each opening flower,
And shading every idle hour
Passed thoughtlessly.

The mating birds—
Sweet singing birds—
Whistling soft and low and clear,
From Southland come for nesting here,
O, happy birds.

Awaken, heart!—
My slumbering heart—
See God's divinest gifts unroll,
Then be the garden of my soul
Where Faith may start.

The Child of Today.

I think that many people are beginning to regret the fact that a really childish child is becoming something of a rarity. There always have been, and no doubt will continue to be, those children of abnormal mental development known as prodigies. But this year they have been before the public in astonishing numbers, either as musicians, poets, artists or preachers, and perhaps by very reason of being overdone the craze for prodigies will die a natural death. For, as some one has remarked, the concert platform applause, which in some cases has almost developed into hysteria, late hours, and the long months and years of practice, must necessarily prove deleterious to the later life of these "infant phenomena."

The same writer also enlarges on the social rounds of fashionable children old before their time. There are orate suppers, with in some instances champagne, as the various festivities which combine to make modern children old before their time. There can be no doubt that the late hours, little sleep, and an absence of healthy outdoor life, are all phases to which children are growing accustomed in too many instances, though there are many people whose children—and royalty's in the front rank—lead natural and simple lives. For in the main children infinitely prefer simplicity of regime.

Recent Theory Regarding Sleep.
An interesting and novel theory of sleep has recently been put forward by Dr. Claparede, a French scientist, who holds that sleep is a positive function or an instinct designed to arrest functioning. Dr. Claparede makes the assertion that we sleep, not because we are fatigued or exhausted, but in order to avoid such conditions. Not only are there various kinds and degrees of sleep, but it does not always follow exhaustion. Furthermore, it is well known that sleep is not proportional to the degree of exhaustion, and it may be either total or partial. In measuring the profundity of sleep various conditions are encountered which are not susceptible of explanation on the toxic theory, but which agree perfectly with the hypothesis that it is a positive nervous function. The definition of sleep, according to this new theory, is a reaction produced by various excitants, and is an inhibition which manifests itself subjectively by a lack of interest in exterior things.—Harper's Weekly.

Marriage Rate in England.
The marriage rate is higher in England than elsewhere, being 15 a 1,000. In most other countries it varies from 7 to 10 a 1,000. The highest birthrate according to a volume of statistics referring chiefly to foreign countries, issued by the British board of trade, is in Roumania—33 a 1,000. That country also has the highest death rate, 27.7 a 1,000. The lowest marriage rate is in Sweden, where it is 9 a 1,000.

One Woman's Way of Painting.
The bright wife of a bright Philadelphia newspaper man has to do some of the housework herself, as her husband's income does not justify the luxury of employing help. The other day, finding out that the floor needed painting, she procured the necessary materials, and early in the afternoon set to work.

When her husband returned in the early evening he found her in tears in the center of the room. She had painted the floor all around herself, and there she was on a little dry island in the middle, afraid of crossing the wet paint for fear of spoiling all her work. Her husband, instead of imitating Sir Walter Raleigh, procured a board and released her from duress vile. Then he meekly told the story.

A DISASTER AVERTED.

The Wife's Forgotten Message.
The great financier was pacing hastily up and down his private office, with a frown of perplexity musing his brow.

"Excuse me, Sir, but the President of the Steel—" ventured a clerk, timidly putting his head in at the door. "Get out!" roared the great financier.

As the moments fled his step grew more and more disordered, and his frown deepened until his bald spot almost touched his eyebrows.

Again the trembling clerk pushed the door far enough open to falter, "The committee of the Anthracite Operators' Assn—"

"Lemme 'lone!" bawled the great financier.

Another long half hour crawled into the cavern of the past, and horrid anxiety had crushed his features together in its remorseless grasp.

Again the clerk, his face pallid, his knees shaking, and his voice quavering, whispered through the keyhole, "The President of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad insists upon seeing—"

"G'way!" howled the great financier. By this time the news had reached the street. Consternation reigned, stocks went down and down, panic was in the air. The outer offices of the great financier swarmed with excited magnates, their hearts in their throats.

There were whispered conferences, grim and strenuous. At length the boldest brushed the terrorized clerks aside and strode sternly toward the private office. As he thrust the door wide open he was greeted with a joyous shout, a shout of victory.

"That's it! that's it! I knew I could remember it!" exclaimed the great financier.

"What is it? What is it?" clamored the crowd, fighting and shoving in its eagerness to get within hearing.

"Why, my wife told me to be sure to bring some seed catalogues home with me, and, by George, I couldn't remember what it was she wanted! All this minute," explained the great financier, smiling triumphantly.—New York Times.

Their Own Lookout.
There was an Irishman who after reaching America was full of homesick brag, in which nothing in America even approached things of a similar variety in Ireland. In speaking of the bees of the old sod he grew especially rosy and said:

"Why, the baze in that country is twice as big as in this, beaded, they're bigger than that—they're as big as the sheep ye have in this country!"

"Bees as big as sheep!" said his incredulous listener. "Why, what kind of hives do they have to keep them in?"

"No bigger than the ones in this country," was the reply.

"Then how do the bees get into the hives," was the reply.

"Well," replied the Irishman, "that's their own lookout!"

DAY DREAMS.
She was such a nice girl. And only twenty.

She had a heart, locked. She carried the key in her hand.

She looked out on a world that was just the same world as you see from a London bus, or from the box-seat of a country coach.

But to her the world was different. She dreamed by day with wide-open eyes and laughing lips.

She peeped the world with strange folk and strange sentiments. It was full of noble women and brave men.

There were no old people with gout and rheumatism. Nor babies with colic or croup. All the people were young and fair and brave.

The ladies were graceful and true and tender. They never used curling pins.

The men were gallant, gay, dashing. They never had faceache or went three days without shaving.

There was no prating of politics, no babbling of work, no labor of the arts. The only topic was love. All the fine men spoke of it and all the fair women listened.

But no gallant had spoken of it to her, and in the gay throng her life was empty.

So she looked out on this strange world, and, on the whole, was happy. But in such happiness at times she would become unspeakably unhappy.

And she would cry, and keep on crying for days.

When her father, who was on the Stock Exchange, said it was silly, she had to agree. She didn't know what she was crying for.

Her brothers laughed—coarse as the male young—and went on shooting rabbits.

But her mother, who had once been a girl, stroked her hair and kissed her. It is only mothers who understand the girl-child.

The girl still lived in her own world, while her father went to the Stock Exchange, her brothers shot rabbits, and her mother disciplined the servants.

So she grew to know that of all the throng in her world she was alone and lonely. And she knew it was not good.

When she was very unhappy, she did not cry so often. Instead, she began to think of a presence which would make her life brighter, of a voice that would make echo in her heart, of the touch of a hand that would make life radiant.

Then she put her hair up. She spent days combing it, and each day she dressed it a different way.

It made the heart of the old stock-broker glow—when he took her to the theatre—with pride.

It made the boys wonder, and they allowed that "Nell was stunning." And it turned men's heads.

It turned one man's head so badly that he never looked away again. In his glance there was something she had not seen in the eyes of any man, and his voice sent funny little tingling music through her heart.

The Wheat Map.
The Northwestern Miller Issues a wheat map of the United States which shows some startling comparisons.

Vermont was once the granary of New York City. It now produces only one bushel of wheat for more than 200 in Minnesota, the banner State.

Rochester was once known as the "Flour City." Now it is called the "Flower City." But New York still raises as much wheat as Wisconsin.

Maryland produces more than either, Texas nearly twice as much and Pennsylvania three times as much. Only eight States surpass Pennsylvania in wheat-raising.

Kansas produces nearly as much wheat as both the Dakotas, which are much more often mentioned as wheat States.

Only a trifle more than half of the wheat crop grows west of the Mississippi. Illinois, Indiana and Ohio still produce 30,000,000 bushels, which is more than any Far Western State, and over one-eighth of the whole crop.

Little Delaware raises more wheat than all New England. Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina raise 36,000,000 bushels.

New York is the second flour-milling centre in the United States, though far behind Minneapolis, which can grind 32,000 barrels a day.

Cleanliness is Essential.
Cleanliness cannot be too strictly observed. The hoe should be used at least twice a week under the perches, and fresh sand or sifted ashes scattered on the floor. The perches should be kept so that they can be taken out when desired. In warm weather they should be examined particularly at the ends and be well rubbed with kerosene. The straw in the nest boxes should be often changed, otherwise will contain a lot of vermin.

All the Crop Raised.
Sylvester R. Burch, chief clerk of the government department of agriculture, comes from Kansas. A Kansas farmer called on Mr. Burch in Washington and all the farming marvels of the department were shown to him. He was silent. He seemed impressed. "I tell you what it is, sir," said Mr. Burch, enthusiastically, "the time is coming when a man will be able to carry all the fertilizer for an acre of ground in one of his waistcoat pockets."

Location of Our Roads.
Many of our roads were originally laid out without any attention to general topography, and in most cases followed the settler's path from cabin to cabin, the pig trail, or ran along the boundary lines of the farms regardless of grades or direction. Most of them remain to-day where they were located years ago, and where untold labor, expense and energy have been wasted in trying to haul over them and in endeavors to improve their deplorable condition.

Working Out Road Tax.
It has been stated that England and France are justly noted for their excellent roads and both have the labor-tax system, and that, therefore, it is possible to have good roads under the labor-tax system. This statement although partially true, is not conclusive argument in favor of the way in which Americans "work out" their road tax in most of the States.

Maintenance of Gravel Roads.
In order to maintain a gravel road in good condition, it is well to keep piles of gravel alongside at frequent intervals, so that the person who repairs the road can get the material without going too far for it. As soon as ruts or holes appear on the surface some of this good fresh material should be added and stamped into position or kept raked smooth until properly consolidated.

Fertilizer Formulas.
Mr. Dean, of Southport, Ind., has had large experience in the use of fertilizers and on the subject gave the following formulas: For worn clay land 2 to 3 per cent. nitrogen, and 6 per cent. each of potash and phosphoric acid. For black land 8 per cent. phosphoric acid, 4 per cent. potash and 1 per cent. nitrogen.

Feed Only Cooling Foods.
One of the first mistakes the show-yard novice is liable to make is to give his animals heavy heating foods in such quantities as will surfeit them. Never overfeed your animals and feed only cooling foods such as are easily digested.

Separating Ewes and Lambs.
If the lambs are separated from the ewes within a period of three months after birth, some attention will be necessary in order to prevent inflammation of the udders of the ewes for the first few days. This may be prevented by milking.

Symptoms of Foot and Mouth Disease.
The symptoms of foot and mouth disease are not always positive, the disease may appear in only one part of the body, cases have been found where the udder or maybe only the teats are affected, on foot, or the lips may be the only part showing the disease.

Beauty of Level, Curved Roads.
Not only do level, curved roads add beauty to the landscape and make lands along them more valuable, but the horse is able to utilize his full strength over them.

We hear farmers say they never again will turn hogs into a field of ripe standing rye, but in the future always will harvest the crop, thresh it and feed ground rye in slops. This will pay.

Long Stylish Overcoats.

The long overcoat retains its popularity and with good reason. It is large and comfortable, affords extra protection and is more becoming to the average man than any other coat. We want to show you our new Kirschbaum overcoats; they are shaped perfectly over the shoulders and chest, the collar hugs the neck, the skirt has a full sweep and forms a circle of which your body is the center. The balance is preserved when you walk, you have a free stride. Made in black and oxford, fancy patterns, Scotch and mixtures. They are cut 52 inches long with full back.
